High court denies Torres' challenge to Kingman's admission

The CNMI Supreme Court has denied a request from former governor Ralph DLG Torres to revoke the admission of James Robert Kingman as the special prosecutor in the criminal case against him. The high court's decision leaves Kingman free to continue the case.

Kingman, an attorney from Texas, was admitted as the special prosecutor in the case on March 6, 2023, after being hired by the Office of the Attorney General.

In April, Torres' lawyers filed a challenge to Kingman's admission, claiming that his application was "materially deficient" on several grounds. They also argued that the application should have been served on them through the court's electronic filing system.

The Supreme Court upheld Kingman's admission, finding that the Office of the Attorney General had complied with all the required laws regarding pro hac vice admission for special prosecutors.

In its decision, the high court wrote, "We find no material deficiency warranting the revocation of Kingman's admission."

The high court also concluded that there is no legal duty to serve an application for admission on opposing parties.

The Attorney General's Office has charged Torres with multiple counts relating to misconduct in public office and theft. Torres has denied all charges.

'Torres administration gave CHCC $11M ARPA money'

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_delatorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The previous Torres administration provided $11 million in American Rescue Plan Act funding to the Commonwealth Healthcare Corp. and CHCC did receive that money in full, according to CHCC chief financial officer Perlita Santos on Wednesday.

In response to Rep. Marissa Renee Flores' (Ind-Saipan) questions during the House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee hearing on CHCC's proposed 2024 budget, Santos said the $11 million was used to augment their financial revenue deficit in fiscal year 2020.

With the increase in the Medicaid population due to the public health emergency arising from the COVID-19 pandemic, CHCC's costs also went up, Santos said.

However, their 2022 cost reimbursements from Medicaid were based on 2020 cost, which means they did not receive an adequate reimbursement in 2022.

"So the $11 million funded the expenditure to support the Medicaid PE [Presumptive Eligibility] patients that went to the hospital," she said.

Santos said they have yet to adjust the 2022 cost report to recover that from Medicaid.

"So the $11 million was used to fund the 2022 cost," Santos said.

89 complete dual program at NMTech, PSS

The Northern Marianas Technical Institute and the CNMI

Public School system have certified 89 students upon the completion of CNMI PSS school year 2022-2023 through their dual enrollment in the Trading Up Program in Construction and Hospitality.

Twelve students from Tanapag Middle School—six eighth graders; five seventh graders; and one sixth grader—received their nationally recognized credential in National Center for Construction

Education and Research Basic Construction Safety—part of CORE Fundamentals, a prerequisite to all construction-related curricula at NMTech.

Five Da'ok Academy students also received their national credential in CORE fundamentals, four of which were awarded at their high school graduation ceremony at the Pedro P. Tenorio Multi-Purpose Center on June 4, 2023. Upon completion, Da'ok graduates are now enrolled in Construction Craft Laborer Level 1 as they continue their journey in their postsecondary education.

A mix of 72 sophomores, juniors, and seniors received an American Hotel and Lodging Education Institute certification yesterday, June 15.

AHLEI is also a nationally recognized certificate in the hospitality industry.

CPA urged to probe non-removal of 4 shipping containers on Rota

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
REPORTER

Sen. Paul A. Manglona (Ind-Rota) requested the Commonwealth Ports Authority yesterday to immediately look into a Rota seaport/stevedore operator's alleged failure to offload four cargo shipping containers, resulting in them being returned to Guam.

Manglona, who chairs the Senate Committee on Public Utilities, Transportation, and Communication, wrote CPA executive director Christopher S. Tenorio and CPA staff attorney Joseph M. Hallahan to express concern relating to Rota Terminal and Transfer Company Inc.'s operations involving the recent shipment of goods to Rota after Typhoon Mawar.

As of press time, Saipan Tribune was still trying to obtain comments from RTT.

The senator said the shipment involved 15 cargo shipping containers—nine 20-foot and six 40-foot containers—which arrived on Rota to be offloaded at Rota's West Harbor last Sunday.

Manglona said he learned that RTT was provided explicit advance notice that the M/V Tamaw Voyage V, which transported the containers from Guam, would arrive at the West Harbor last Sunday morning, and was required to depart no later than the afternoon of the following day, Monday.

Yet, the senator said, between the Sunday arrival, and the Monday departure, RTT personnel removed only 11 of the 15 containers.

Manglona said this, in turn, left multiple Rota business owners, and the Rota community, shaking their collective heads in dismay, as RTT personnel never offloaded the four remaining containers.

Instead, he said, the four containers remained aboard and were returned to Guam, leaving their Rota vendors with zero to show for their efforts other than shipping bills for cargo shipped to but never unloaded by RTT.

He said those vendors included Harvest Market for two containers, and Sinapalo Safeway Store and Ace Hardware/Rota each for one container.

"Will perhaps RTT compensate those vendors? Will Commonwealth Ports Authority?" Manglona asked.

The senator asked CPA to notify him within seven days, in writing, as to what, if any, remedial action CPA has or shall take in response to this matter.

He said this incident constitutes yet the latest material breach of the CPA-RTT lease agreement.

"I thought to myself, 'Where is this going? What am I doing to advance myself?'" said Rideb.

Just one month later, after Typhoon Mawar lashed Guam with 140mph winds that cut the island's power, Rideb found that purpose and direction. He was chosen by his supervisors at the Commonwealth Utilities Corp. to assist the Guam Power Authority with restoring power to the people of his neighboring island.

Typhoon Mawar struck Guam as a Category 4 storm on May 24, bringing hurricane-force winds, heavy rain, and high seas, marking the strongest storm to affect the island since Typhoon Pongsona in 2002.

Due to the tireless efforts of Guam Power Authority linemen, their helpers like Rideb from the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and other first responders working around the clock, the island's power grid was over half restored in about two weeks.

"When they told me I was chosen to come here, I felt proud," said Rideb. "I'm going to come here and help our people in Guam, because we're all neighbors, brothers and sisters."

Rideb acknowledged Guam's assistance to the CNMI in 2018, when Super Typhoon Yutu devastated Saipan, Tinian, and parts of Rota.

"I took it upon myself that I'm going to come out here, because they did the same to us. They came up there to help us, and if you're in need, we're always there," said Rideb. "It's a different job itself (compared ded to pieces by Japanese mortar.

"I've been wanting to come here since I was 8 years old. My dad was wounded here and I basically wanted to see where they landed. He had talked about digging a foxhole while being shelled in a cemetery."

Thomas said his father, PFC James D. Ortman, was part of the Wake Island Avengers, a group of men who enlisted in the U.S. Army shortly after the Japanese took Wake Island in December 1941.

However, it took more than two years before Ortman saw his first combat action when he was part of the invasion force that stormed the island in June 1944. He was part of the 23rd Marine regiment, 4th Division, M Company, that landed on the beach near where the Saipan Community Church now stands.

Tom said his father didn't really talk much about the Battle of Saipan, but he inferred from what little interaction he had with him that it brought his father to a dark place.

"Just very little and only every once in a while. If we were watching a John Wayne movie and they had a scene where the guy was crawling from foxhole to foxhole...all he said was, 'I did that.' That's all he said and I never asked him anything more about it."

That experience in the Pacific War probably left such a bad impression that when Tom told him he was about to take a physical to enlist in the Vietnam War, the elder Ortman became livid.

"I tried to enlist in the Marines. My friend told me, 'You better tell your dad.' So the night before the physical, I told him. I've never seen him mad at me in my whole life except that time; he was dead set against me going into service. He said, 'if you go into service, I won't be here when you come home.'"

Tom said that fateful day in the Chalan Kanoa cemetery where mortars were exploding around him changed his then 22-year-old father forever.

ALLOW

Muñia said they already had discussions with Medicaid about allowing foreign hospitals to be covered under the program, but it will require to be approved first by the CNMI governor and then reviewed and approved by the Region IX Medicaid Office.

By allowing foreign hospitals, Muñia said, CHCC will see some savings in airfare and treatment.

She said they did sign Memorandum of Understanding agreements with some of the providers and they're adding more with foreign hospitals.

"We're not an insurance and we want the insurance company to be able to pay for medical care," Muna said.

By having this MOU, she said, they can actually have, for example, pickup service or logistics service that can be accommodated.

"We're working with that, but, again, the key component is Medicaid, because most of our patients that are being referred are actually Medicaid patients," Muñia added.

She said they are hoping that the foreign hospital state plan will be approved.

The CEO said they are also looking at allowing patients to go anywhere in the continental United States wherever their families are so that they can also reduce costs.

She said one of the drafts that they submitted to Medicaid was providing Presumptive Eligibility for 90 days for patients who are getting transferred out of CHCC so that at least they have some type of coverage and it will cover them the airfare.

Muñia said some territories are covering subsistence and some territories are covering lodging and ground transportation.

"So those are the things that we would like Medicaid to approve and have the government approve it, federal and local so that we can actually have a sustainable program," she said.

Castro said a lot of CNMI's referral patients are being brought to places like Hawaii or California, which are expensive locations. He then asked about CHCC looking at other locations that are more affordable, like the Philippines or Taiwan.

He also asked if it is possible for CHCC to get a loan to procure a facility in those countries like a hotel where CHCC can also generate revenue—a place that can accommodate not just for indigent patients or people on medical referral, but other people in general.

Castro said he knows that a state plan in American Samoa allows them to send patients to New Zealand, which is not part of the U.S.

"I think a lot of the work really needs to go up to Medicaid to form a state plan that closes a lot of these gaps," the lawmaker said.

Rep. Blas Jonathan T. Attao (Ind-Saipan) said he and Sen. Celina R. Babauta (D-Saipan) have been working with Guam to find out how they were accepted to allow Medicaid and Medicare patients to be seen in the Philippines.

"So they've got that contractor agreements. We have been working with Guam on how that process went so we can actually try to decrease the costs," Attao said.

Kaitlyn Neises-Mocanu, who is the chief strategy officer at CHCC, said the strategy of reducing costs for medical referral is twofold—improving island services and expanding on-island services.

"It's a shame that we're spending so much money off-island and it's local money," Mocanu said.

She said beefing up local services is one component and that improving the data systems that they have around Medicare has been a priority for Muñia and for the Health Network Program team.

Mocanu said the other component is maximizing Medicaid funding.

middle school students from TMS was then implemented, resulting in 12 certified students out of the 17 who signed up. The NMTech-PSS team is currently working on coordinating the transition of these students into high school and/or into other NMTech programs to ensure that their career pathway journey continues. # People are fed up and want more protection—Hinds

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES
kimberly_esmores@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Office of the Attorney General’s Criminal Division has heard time and time again that the community wants more protection against repeat offenders and the OAG believes passing the Bail Reform Act would provide that.

Chief prosecutor Chester Hinds, who heads the division, said he supports the proposed Keisha King Bail Reform Act, believing it’s a step in the right direction for the CNMI.

“I understand that there’s a lot of concern that a defendant’s rights will be taken away, but I don’t think that that’s the case with this bill. This bill is actually trying to strike a balance between a defendant’s rights and protecting the community,” he said.

Time and time again, Hinds said, the CNMI community has sought more protection against repeat offenders who are out on bail and the OAG believes that the Bail Reform Act strikes a balance between protecting the community and preserving an individual’s rights.

“People in the community are fed up; they want more protection. They want the judges to do more; they want the OAG to do more; they want the Department of Public Safety to do more. This bill helps give the judges and the OAG the ability to keep repeat offenders in custody,” he said.

“So when someone gets arrested and they already have a record, they might be on probation or they have a criminal record from the past for a violent offense, these are the kinds of defendants that the community doesn’t want to see back out again. They obviously could hurt someone else and this bill is going to help with that,” Hinds added.

He explained that the bill still preserves an individual’s rights because it doesn’t call for a judge to deny bail outright. Instead, the bill requires the OAG’s Criminal Division to file a motion to deny bail along with evidence, and a hearing is held before a judge who decides whether or not denial of bail is warranted.

“The court cannot outright deny bail; that cannot happen. Regardless of what offense you’re arrested for, outside of murder, you can get bail but this gives the court the ability to decide, ‘You’re a repeat offender. . . .We’re going to deny bail based on your history.’ If this legislation is passed, the court must give the prosecution an opportunity to present evidence and file for a motion to deny bail. If we are able to present their criminal record, what kind of crime it was, and if we can prove with the preponderance of evidence that this person should be denied bail, then the court can deny bail. This law does not take away the court’s discretion,” he said.

In addition, Hinds said the legislation also requires that the prosecution is given a 24-hour notice of a bail modification. That’s not the case right now, as bail modification can happen at any time. During this time, the prosecution can file their motion if they believe the person should be denied bail or not.

Hinds believes that the bill, in its current language, is reasonable and fair.

“I don’t agree that this legislation is unconstitutional. I think other jurisdictions have something similar to this bill. This is not to overstep in anyway. It just provides a balance between a defendant’s rights and protecting the community from repeat offenders. The judge isn’t just going to deny bail just because. This legislation requires that a hearing is held, the prosecution was given a chance to present a motion and evidence, it isn’t an automatic denial. If it was, then I could see the argument that it’s unconstitutional but that’s not the case,” he said.

The Office of the Public Defender and a group of private lawyers are opposed to the bill.

Ada/Saipan International Airport, beginning 1:00 p.m., Monday, June 5, 2023, upon the payment of ONE HUNDRED FIFTY U.S. DOLLARS ($150.00) for each set of plans and documents. The payment is nonrefundable unless bids are canceled. Payment shall be made in cash, credit card, cashier's check or U.S. postal money order payable to the Commonwealth Ports Authority. Bidders should notify CPA's point of contact mentioned below immediately if there are issues retrieving the files on the DVD and are to verify all information using the specification table of contents and the index of drawings.

A pre-bid conference will be held at the Francisco C. Ada/Saipan International Airport, at 10:00 A.M. (CHST), MONDAY, JUNE 12, 2023, at the Saipan Airport Conference Room to explain and clarify any questions regarding this project. Attendance is not mandatory. A site visit will follow the pre-bid conference.

Questions should be submitted in writing to the CPA Executive Director's Office, 2nd floor of the Arrival Terminal at the Francisco C. Ada/Saipan International Airport or emailed to Ms. Wendi L. Prater, Executive Assistant/Project Manager at wprater@cnmiports.com at least ten (10) days prior to the bid opening date; with the exception of extension requests which have no deadline. Responses to all questions and requests for information will be provided to all bidders who purchased a DVD and attended the pre-bid conference.

Bidders shall use the bid schedule form furnished by the Commonwealth Ports Authority on the DVD. Each bidder should supply all supplemental information required in the specifications.

The contract period for construction of the project shall be TWO HUNDRED TEN (210) CALENDAR DAYS. Liquidated damages in the amount of FIVE HUNDRED U.S. DOLLARS ($500.00) per calendar days shall be assessed the contractor if the completion of the Project is delayed beyond the contract time without excuse.

The apparent low bidder will be subject to a thorough and comprehensive review of its qualifications and Bid Documents to ensure that they are “responsive and responsible.” This review will include, but is not necessarily limited to previous project experience, financial capabilities, quality of equipment and personnel, and bonding and insurance. If the apparent low bidder is found not to be “responsive or responsible”, their bid will be rejected and the next lowest bidder will be evaluated for qualifications.

The Commonwealth Ports Authority reserves the right to reject any or all bid proposals submitted for: (a) any of the reasons set forth in this Notice to Bidders; or (b) any of the reasons set forth in the CPA Procurement Rules and Regulations regarding bid rejection or cancellation; (c) any calculation error made in the bid schedule or mis-enter of the quantity of line item; or (d) sufficient justification exists that awarding the project contract would not be in the best interest of CPA. CPA further reserves the right to waive any defects in said bids if in its sole opinion to do so would be in CPA's best interest.

Each bid shall be accompanied by either a bid bond by a U.S. Treasury listed or CPA approved surety company, a certified check, or a cashier's check in the amount not less than ten percent (10%) of the bid price. Checks shall be made payable to the Commonwealth Ports Authority.

All mechanics and laborers for this procurement project shall be paid no less than the minimum wage rate established by the CNMI or the U.S. Secretary of Labor, whichever is higher. A copy of the Department of the Federal Labor Wage Rate Determination is included in Section GP 70-28 of the specifications. The bidder shall take into account minimum wage increases that may be imposed in the CNMI over the life of the Contract and include associated costs in the bid proposal. The EEO requirements, labor provisions, and wage rates are included in the specifications.

The Commonwealth Ports Authority, in accordance with the provisions of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (78 Stat. 252, 42 USC §§ 2000d to 2000d-4) and the Regulations, hereby notifies all bidders or offerors that it will affirmatively ensure that any contract entered into pursuant to this advertisement, disadvantaged business enterprises will be afforded full and fair opportunity to submit bids in response to this invitation and will not be discriminated against on the grounds of race, color, or national origin in consideration for an award.

The United States Secretary of Transportation has granted the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands an exemption from the requirements of the Department of Transportation's Minority Business Enterprise (MBE) regulation, which later became the Department of Transportation's Disadvantaged Business Enterprise program, as it relates to FAA grant programs. The Secretary of Transportation has not determined that a portion of those requirements should be reinstated.

By submitting a bid/proposal under this solicitation, the bidder or offeror certifies that neither it nor its principals are presently debarred or suspended by any Federal department or agency from participation in this transaction.

In addition to the above, all bidders shall comply with all other Federal requirements under this procurement, including but not limited to Buy American Preference, Foreign Trade Restriction, Davis Bacon, Veteran's Preference, Affirmative Action and Government wide Debarment and Suspension and Governmentwide Requirements for Drug-free Workplace. # Tender sailors help NBG power grid

By VICTORIA KINNEY
USS EMORY S. LAND (AS-39)

POLARIS POINT NAVAL BASE GUAM, Guam—After Typhoon Mawar hit the small island of Guam, many residents on U.S. Naval Base Guam were left without power. Many of the island’s residents compared Typhoon Mawar to Super Typhoon Pongsona, which was one of the most intense typhoons to ever strike the island. After Pongsona struck the island in 2002, an assessment team was formed to examine the effects of the storm. Even though provisions were made in preparation for another storm of the same magnitude, the direct hit by Typhoon Mawar had severely stressed the existing infrastructure.

The physical damage caused by the typhoon was limited due to the hard work of sailors from the submarine tenders USS Emory S. Land (AS 39) (ESL) and USS Frank Cable (AS 40) (FCB) who had been tasked with preparing Polaris Point before the storm. Their efforts included preparing sand bags, removing debris, removing hazardous materials from the waterfront, and ensuring the readiness of the Emergent Repair Facility. However, the winds in excess of 125 knots still caused significant damage to above-ground power lines and to many of the island’s power generation facilities. Sailors from ESL and FCB, along with Seabees from Task Force 75, immediately pitched in to install and maintain emergency generators and to assist the base Public Works Department, Naval Facilities Engineering Command, and Guam Power Authority in restoring power to military installations and housing areas across the island.

“I heard that they needed volunteers at the Orote Power Plant on base and could use personnel that are smart with mechanics on diesel engines,” said Machinist’s Mate (Nuclear) 1st Class Tybalt Ridgard, assigned to ESL, from Hawthorne, Fla. “I’m a nuclear trained machinist’s mate, so although that’s not my specialty, I was sure I could help out somehow.”

Multiple crew members of the submarine tenders volunteered to provide assistance with the recovery of Orote Point Power Plant, to include Machinist’s Mate Auxiliary 1st Class Edward Going, assigned to ESL, from Natural Bridge, N.Y. “When I joined the Navy, I wanted a change and an opportunity to a better career path,” Going said. “When I saw the opportunity to help, I knew I wanted to give back and to put my skills to use for something bigger.”

Orote Point Power Plant was constructed to be a standby generation unit to supplement Guam Power Authority’s islandwide distribution system. The plant can also be used as an emergency source for essential facilities, but has been in a long-term layup for major structural and electrical work that was scheduled to complete next year. Nevertheless, diesel and electrical experts from ESL, FCB, and the local Performance Monitoring Team were able to make emergency repairs and restore one 6 MW diesel engine to operation on May 31. The work included repairing and reinstalling cooling systems, replacing engine gaskets and expansion boots, and devising options to route the power output to key distribution systems despite significant electrical switchgear removed for overhaul. Sailors hand-cut the needed gaskets from a large sheet of material that was available from the ship.

Sailors from ESL and FCB also played a key role in other vital tasks, including connecting emergency generators to the base commissary and cold food storage, fitness center, and barracks, repairing damaged air conditioners at the barracks and at McCool Elementary and Middle School, supporting underwater inspections of the harbor and vessels, and in moving merchandise and books out of the Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society Thrift Store and base library before mold damage could set in.

“Our sailors have an impressive range of mechanical, electrical, diving, and other technical skills, as well as tremendous creativity” said Capt. Brent Spillner, commanding officer of the Emory S. Land. “Every time they hear about a generator or air conditioning plant not working properly, they take that as a personal challenge, and I’m convinced that there’s absolutely nothing they can’t repair or rebuild.”

“I was happy that my efforts successfully contributed to the power restoration on base,” said Ridgard.

Will we every truly know the depth of pandemic fraud?

The late American satirist P.J. O'Rourke once cracked that "Giving money and power to government is like giving whiskey and car keys to teenage boys." The $32 trillion national debt is one testament to the accuracy of his observation. The billions and billions of dollars that Washington squandered during the pandemic is yet another.

The Associated Press on Monday unveiled the results of an investigation headlined "The Great Grift," cataloging how the federal government got ripped off in its effort to mitigate the economic carnage of COVID. The fraud was so widespread that it might be another two years before federal accountants can tally an accurate total. For now, however, the wire service report pegs the figure at about $420 billion—or 10 percent of the $4.2 trillion the government spent on pandemic relief.

"Investigators and outside experts say the government, in seeking to quickly spend trillions in relief aid, conducted too little oversight during the pandemic's early stages and instituted too few restrictions on applicants," the AP wrote. "In short, they say, the grift was just way too easy."

To make matters worse, agencies failed to do their due diligence in many instances, such as consulting a "Do Not Pay" Treasury database that includes rogue contractors, tax cheats, felons and other nefarious characters. Michael Horowitz, the U.S. Justice Department inspector general who chairs the federal Pandemic Response Accountability Committee, told the wire service that using such safeguards would have caused only minor delays in the dispersal of COVID relief and would have saved taxpayers billions.

"It's a false narrative that has been set out, that there are only two choices," he said. "One choice is, get the money out right away. And that the only other choice was to spend weeks and months trying to figure out who was entitled to it."

Federal prosecutors have charged more than 2,200 people with illegally collecting checks and have thousands of investigations pending. But will anyone in the federal bureaucracy be held accountable for failing to abide by the usual precautions intended to protect taxpayers? Don't bet on it. Had a private company lost billions of dollars due to such bungling, it would fast be out of business, its executives in the unemployment line. In Washington, this is business as usual.

The stark difference is that, if private entities act foolishly, they risk their own financial health or investor cash. Washington, on the other hand, plays with other people's money, so who cares? Which is why the country is barreling toward the fiscal cliff, as an empty whiskey bottle rattles around on the floorboard.

Stabilize US-China relations—before a 'near miss' turns into a crisis

This week, Secretary of State Antony Blinken will travel to Beijing—the latest, welcome effort by Washington to inject stability into a dangerously fraught U.S.-China relationship.

Yet despite their progress toward constructive diplomacy, the two nations' relationship remains at the lowest point since relations were normalized in the seventies, characterized by mutual suspicion and hostility, especially when it comes to the issue of Taiwan.

A recent close encounter between a U.S. destroyer and a Chinese warship in the Taiwan Strait highlights how—unless Beijing and Washington take meaningful steps to avert it—the dangerous dynamics driving the world's two most powerful countries toward a possible crisis or conflict over Taiwan can quickly overwhelm any nascent diplomatic thaw.

The incident in question involved a potentially dangerous maneuver by the Chinese warship, which cut in front of the U.S. warship at a distance of 150 yards. This unprecedented maneuver—the first of its kind in the Taiwan Strait—reflects an escalation in Beijing's overall efforts to challenge what it sees as an American escalation regarding Taiwan. China's perceptions are shaped in part by an erosion of Washington's long-standing One China policy and increased U.S. efforts to elicit greater support for its Taiwan policy from distant allies like Canada (whose warship took part in this weekend's transit).

China's latest action exemplifies the larger "tit-for-tat" dynamic that has come to define U.S. and Chinese interactions, whereby each side doubles down on what it sees as deterrence signals that in fact only serve to provoke further such signals.

Beijing might be attempting to create a new "normal" by employing more aggressive military means to achieve a position of military dominance around Taiwan, or at least to counter what it views as U.S. efforts to militarily dominate or intimidate China in its backyard. China's Defense Minister Li Shangfu said as much in recent remarks at the Shangri-la Dialogue following the warship incident, criticizing the U.S. for exercising "hegemony of navigation" near Taiwan and called for Washington to "take good care of its own territorial airspace and waters."

Washington of course rejects such Chinese efforts and justifications, asserting that it is merely exercising its legal right to operate militarily outside of China's territorial waters. But it is also clearly intent on sending a strong deterrence signal via such actions, and other military operations near Taiwan. And, according to private discussions, some U.S. military officers involved in the Taiwan Strait transits apparently relish the fact that such U.S. operations succeed in provoking the Chinese.

In this vicious cycle, neither government (or military) officially acknowledges that it is escalating and thereby worsening the situation, despite the obvious contrary reality. If the cycle continues, the Taiwan Strait will witness more such incidents, and thus likely serve as a crucible for future, more severe crises.

To avoid the next close encounter turning into a crisis, Washington should build on its recent diplomatic overtures by making its commitment to the One China policy clear and credible. The United States should reaffirm its openness to any long-term peaceful, uncoerced outcome of the Taiwan situation—something it used to say regularly. As a gesture of its seriousness, the United States should also reduce the frequency of its "freedom of navigation" operations (FONOPs) and Taiwan Strait transits.

None of this should occur in the absence of Beijing clearly conveying its continued commitment to a peaceful, uncoerced resolution of the Taiwan issue as a first priority, and ending its dangerous military pushback in the Taiwan Strait and elsewhere around the island. It also needs to confirm that it has no deadline for resolving the Taiwan issue.

If Washington and Beijing truly seek to avoid a disastrous conflict, constructive diplomacy designed to stabilize their bilateral relationship is paramount. They should begin discussions to reach these understandings on Taiwan, the most critical issue affecting peace and security in Asia and beyond.

Until both sides work constructively to unwind this tit-for-tat dynamic, close calls like this will keep happening—and a serious crisis over Taiwan may not be a matter of if, but when.

Father's Day: Honoring the unsung heroes

Father's Day is an extraordinary occasion with a special place in our hearts. This memorable day allows us to express our gratitude and pay tribute to the unsung heroes who have significantly shaped our lives and provided unconditional love and support. While Mother's Day often takes the spotlight, Father's Day is an equally momentous occasion that allows us to recognize and appreciate the invaluable contributions of fathers and father figures. This time, we can honor and acknowledge the immense sacrifices, hard work, and dedication fathers have shown in raising and guiding us.

Throughout the years, the role of fathers has played a significant transformation. Gone are the days when fathers were solely responsible for financially supporting their families. Today's fathers are actively involved in nurturing their children, performing household chores, and making significant sacrifices for the well-being of their families. Father's Day serves as a timely reminder to acknowledge and celebrate the evolution of fatherhood. We can demonstrate our gratitude and appreciation for fathers by recognizing their efforts to maintain a healthy work-life balance and actively participate in their children's lives. By doing so, we can help foster stronger family bonds and create a more nurturing and supportive environment for everyone.

Reflecting on the lessons learned

Father's Day allows us to reflect on the valuable life lessons we have learned from our fathers. Fathers instill essential values that shape our character, whether it's perseverance, resilience, or integrity. One of the most memorable aspects of my father's love was his tradition of giving us a pasalubong whenever he returned home from work. Pasalubong is a Filipino term for a gift or souvenir that are brought back from a trip. How he distributed it among us made my father's pasalubong genuinely remarkable. Rather than giving a single snack to any of us, my father would divide it equally among his four daughters. As I grew older, this seemingly simple act held profound significance as it fostered a sense of fairness, unity, and shared experiences. My father's act of justice created a sense of unity and camaraderie among us. We eagerly anticipated the pasalubong, not just for the gift itself but also for the opportunity to bond as sisters. In those moments, we forged a deep bond, transcending time and distance, becoming a pillar of support throughout our lives.

Expressing gratitude toward your father for the invaluable advice and knowledge he has imparted to you is vital to cultivating a strong and healthy relationship with him. Acknowledging his guidance's influence on your growth and accomplishments is a significant way to show your appreciation and respect for his wisdom and experience. So, take the time to express gratitude for the knowledge and guidance he imparted to you and acknowledge its impact on your personal growth and success.

Celebrating diversity in fatherhood

As we celebrate Father's Day, it's a vital opportunity to recognize and pay tribute to all those individuals who have taken on a father's challenging and rewarding role, irrespective of genetic ties. We must acknowledge the countless uncles, grandfathers, stepfathers, and mentors who have selflessly stepped up and played an essential paternal role in our lives. It's necessary to appreciate and commemorate the unique contributions of all these diverse individuals who have positively impacted us. Let's take a moment to express our heartfelt gratitude and honor all those who have broadened our understanding and appreciation of fatherhood beyond conventional norms and boundaries.

Creating lasting memories

Father's Day is a beautiful time to create cherished memories with our fathers. It's the perfect opportunity to plan activities that cater to his interests and passions, making him feel genuinely valued and appreciated. Consider organizing a family outing to a place he loves, preparing his favorite meal, or simply engaging in activities you enjoy together. These shared experiences will strengthen your bond and leave a lasting impression. Celebrating Father's Day thoughtfully and personally demonstrates your understanding and appreciation for what truly matters to him.

Father's Day is an annual occasion that calls for us to pay tribute to the invaluable contributions of fathers and father figures in our lives. It is a time to pause and reflect on the valuable life lessons we have learned from them and appreciate their impact on our personal growth and development. Moreover, Father's Day is an opportunity for us to embrace the changing dynamics of fatherhood and to celebrate the diversity of fatherhood experiences that exist in our society. Above all, it is a time to create lasting memories with our fathers and to express our sincere thanks and appreciation for their unwavering love and support throughout the years. Happy Father's Day to all the wonderful fathers throughout the world!

Trump has officially broken the Republican Party

There are tens of millions of conservatives in the U.S. For American democracy to succeed, they need a political party that productively channels their aspirations, represents their ideologies, mediates their conflicts and functions in accord with democratic values and the rule of law.

No such party exists.

The vacuum is only partly a collective action problem. Pro-democracy conservative elites have failed to organize to defend democracy and advance their interests. The third-tier candidates opposing Donald Trump and Florida Governor Ron DeSantis for the GOP presidential nomination can't even settle on a narrative for why such brazenly anti-democratic politicians pose a danger.

Arriving at a collective strategy to neutralize the threat is even more unlikely. Former Representative Liz Cheney has been a brave truth teller. But she has been mostly singing solo, which enabled MAGA supporters to isolate, demonize and remove her from power.

The problem is also a function of how deeply askew the GOP was even before Trump. The Republican demand for stupid conspiracy theories to explain the world — climate scientists are all making it up, Barack Obama is an African-born socialist — presaged the moral collapse into Trumpism.

The party may have plumbed a new low after Trump was indicted last week on 37 felony counts for allegedly mishandling classified documents, including highly classified state secrets. The former president was also charged with obstructing the federal investigation.

The indictment was in some ways an homage to the alternate universe inhabited by the Republican Party. It consisted of evidence untainted by association with the world outside MAGA. There were photographs taken by Trump staff. Texts between Trump employees. Transcripts of audiotape of Trump talking. Sworn testimony from Trump lawyers. Transcripts of Trump public statements. It was a collection of facts exfiltrated from the MAGAsphere and derived exclusively from the MAGA king and his subjects. But the provenance of individual facts is irrelevant once you have rejected the legitimacy of facts altogether.

Most Republican elites took a look at the damning reality of the indictment, and promptly rejected the latest opportunity to break with Trumpism. Some addressed the indictment in the traditional manner, by misleading Fox News viewers about Hillary Clinton. Others shoveled buckets of nonsense. Still others resorted to rewriting the law in their heads to render Trump's actions magically lawful. Some argued that the man who led chants of "lock her up" wasn't being afforded the same grace and forbearance that he had magnanimously bestowed upon his (noncriminal) political opponents.

There were instances of honesty, from Senators Lisa Murkowski and Mitt Romney, and even from William Barr, who as Trump's attorney general facilitated Trump's attacks on democracy. (Barr appears to have drifted toward the rule of law crowd after Jan. 6, 2021.) But the isolated, uncoordinated, musings of select conservatives are unlikely to have a significant impact on the Republican electorate.

In a CBS News poll taken after the indictment was announced, 80% of likely GOP primary voters said they would like Trump to be able to be president even if he is convicted. Three-quarters want a nominee "similar to Trump" if Trump is not the nominee. Meanwhile, the New York Times reported "a wave" of calls for violence by Trump supporters. The Washington Post likewise noted a "surge" in violent right-wing rhetoric.

The chicken-and-egg dilemma of the GOP—Republican elites won't risk telling the base the truth because the base doesn't want to hear it, and those voters never learn the truth because party leaders and party-aligned media only give them what they want—has been going on since at least 2016. Without concerted action by Republican elites, it's hard to see how the party pulls out of its anti-democratic spiral.

Relaying his discussions about Trump's indictment with people "inside the Republican race" for president, CBS News reporter Robert Costa said Sunday: "There is alarm in the sense that they believe if he wins the presidency again, he is now so comfortable with the levers of power, and he ignores the rule of law in the eyes of some of his [GOP] competitors, that he could be a threat to American democracy. Yet very few are saying that publicly."

Democracy barely survived Trump's first term, which ended with his instigating a violent assault to halt the transfer of power to a newly elected government. It's unlikely it could survive a second round.

The most pressing task for anyone eager to bolster democracy is to find a way to make a viable, intra-party fighting force of Murkowskis and Romneys and even the unreliable Barrs. Though a GOP rescue mission has yet to materialize, that doesn't mean that it won't. It took a few years to repel the force of McCarthyism in the early 1950s.

The trouble is, this is year eight of MAGA's dominion over the party. If millions of Republicans are still clamoring for Trump, it's unlikely that it's because they've failed to notice that he is spectacularly corrupt. For many followers, his lies and grift and even his buffoonery and contempt for national security are a net positive, another means to convey their own loathing for elites and a system that they feel discounts them. Attacks on pluralistic, multi-racial, democracy won't stop anytime soon.

With work, luck and pluck, Democrats and independents can repel the GOP. But they can't reform it. Only Republicans can do that. Many Republicans appear to be waiting, still, for the right moment. Like last weekend.

SUPERHEROES in disguise

A FATHER'S DAY ADVERTISING SUPPLEMENT

Today's Superhero Dad

By TERI M. FLORES
CORRESPONDENT

Father's Day is this Sunday, June 18, traditionally set aside to honor and acknowledge the contributions that fathers make in the lives of their children and their own families.

"Anyone can father a child but being a dad takes a lifetime," an unknown pundit once said, and the American Academy of Pediatrics agrees. In their clinical report, these doctors underscored the fact that fathers play a role in every child's life that cannot be filled by others. Fathers mold our cognitive and emotional growth on which we build who we become later on in life.

Dads are not just superheroes in the eyes of their children, but these hard facts show the truth behind this monicker. Fathers who are highly involved in their children's lives rear children with increased mental dexterity, empathy, and greater self-control. Also, dads who play and roughhouse with their kids foster better emotional intelligence, memory, learning, morals, and ethics in children.

Despite these contributions, only 39% of fathers believe they're doing a "very good job" at being a dad, compared to 51% of mothers who believe in the merits of their contributions.

The latest U.S. Census show that, as of 2022, there are 72.2 million fathers nationwide. Globally, it is estimated that there is a total of 1.5 billion to 2 billion fathers in all.

Changing attitudes on fatherhood have seen the millennial dad evolve into a much more hands-on parent than their baby boomer and Gen X counterparts. Today, there are about 2 million to 4 million fathers who have opted to stay home and have become increasingly more likely than women to change careers, decline a pay raise, move, or leave the country to better suit their family's needs. It's comforting to know that the millennial dad says "I love you" more frequently than their parents did and that more fathers are showing affection to their children than they received as kids.

So, kudos goes to Dad, Poppa, Pops, Pappu, or whatever name he is known in your family. You are indeed a superhero nonpareil!

"The greatest mark of a father is how he treats his children when no one is looking."

—Dan Pearce

Trivia, info, and other Father's Day nuggets

By TERI M. FLORES
CORRESPONDENT

In honor of that special man in our lives who provides the template for who we eventually become in life, these nuggets of information show why they earn the moniker of superhero.

Historians describe Father's Day as an event that complements Mother's Day in celebrating fathers, fathering, and fatherhood. Observed in 111 countries worldwide, Father's Day is celebrated every third week of June among several countries, including in the United States, Canada, the United Kingdom; Algeria and Kenya in Africa; Argentina and Colombia in South America; and in Japan, Singapore, and the Philippines in Asia. A host of other countries celebrate the occasion on different dates and depending on the country's tradition.

Irish and Polish communities, as well as Spain and Portugal, join other Catholic countries in observing Father's Day on March 19, which also falls on the Feast of St. Joseph. In Taiwan, Father's Day is held on Aug. 8—the eighth day of the eighth month—as the Mandarin Chinese word for eight sounds like the word for “Papa.” Father's Day in Thailand is celebrated on Dec. 5, which is the birthday of former King Bhumibol Adulyadej.

The earliest mention of a Father's Day celebration dates to 1508 when it was considered as a Southern European tradition.

ticularly in the United States, Father's Day finally being declared a U.S. national holiday only gained momentum in 1972, even though efforts to make the celebration official began in 1910,

Two women take the credit for getting Father's Day recognized: Grace Golden Clayton and Sonora Smart Dodd. Clayton, the daughter of a devoted minister, organized the first known event dedicated to fathers on July 5, 1908, with a father-themed memorial honoring 360 men, most of whom were fathers, who died in the worst mining accident in U.S. history. This annual event, however, failed to gain momentum since it was only promoted within the confines of the West Virginia community.

Officially known to have placed Father's Day on the calendar is Dodd who, with support from the Spokane Ministerial Association and the Young Men's Christian Association, hosted a "father's day" event honoring her father and other fathers as well. The event was originally scheduled to be held on June 5, which was the birthday of Dodd's father. However, the date changed to June 19, 1910, and became an annual event from thereon. Soon after this, other towns began holding their own Father's Day celebrations.

Despite widespread support, Father's Day became an official, permanent public holiday just 51 years ago. President Woodrow Wilson in 1913 was the first among four U.S. Presidents who supported the passage of the first bill in the U.S. Congress commemorating Father's Day. Congress initially resisted

History of Father's Day

The idea of Father's Day was conceived more than a century ago by Sonora Dodd of Spokane, Washington. Dodd wanted a special day to honor her father, William Smart, a widowed Civil War veteran who was left to raise his six children on a farm.

In 1966, then-President Lyndon Johnson issued a proclamation setting aside the third Sunday in June to honor fathers. Father's Day has been celebrated annually since 1972, when then-President Richard Nixon signed a law making it a permanent national holiday.

because they were worried about commercialization.

In 1921, President Calvin Coolidge signed a resolution in favor of Father's Day "to establish more intimate relations between fathers and their children and to impress upon fathers the full measure of their obligations." Then in 1966, President Lyndon Johnson signed an executive order designating the third Sunday in June the official day to observe Father's Day. But it was only under President Richard Nixon when Congress passed an act officially making Father's Day a national holiday.

According to historical accounts, the event failed to evoke the same sentiments of gratitude and thanks people feel for mothers on Mother's Day. It is widely believed that sociological changes and attitude toward fatherhood were the reasons behind the delay in officially making Father's Day a U.S. national holiday.

Historians further claim that a majority of the population did not warm up to the idea of commercializing the occasion with men receiving gifts.

ing flowers and gifts, which eventually were often paid for by the father himself.

In American Fatherhood: A Cultural History by Lawrence R. Samuel, the author also stated that during the first half of the 20th century, families were patriarchal in nature, hence it was pointless to honor fathers when it was the mothers who were underappreciated.

Two economic events that also helped push forward the concept of Father's Day were the Great Depression and World War II. Like Mother's Day, it was the struggling store owners who used Father's Day to make an extra buck with the sale of ties, clothes, and other goods that men needed. Father's Day was also meant to support and show appreciation to American men and fathers who were in the front lines during World War II.

REPORTER

Fathers are there for our first breath, our first steps, and are our first cheerleaders and fans. This Father's Day, we honor our fathers who have been our lifelong superheroes and supporters as they shape all aspects of our lives.

Fortunately for the CNMI, it has an abundance of fathers and father figures who all deserve to be honored this Sunday and throughout the rest of the year for their involvement and active roles in the lives of their children, whether as fledgling coaches, cheerleaders, or their kids' very first fans.

Nick Gross, father, athlete, and husband, knows what it's like to wear all three hats. As the Athletic Program director for the Public School System, he and his wife, Rhonda Camacho Gross, are both lifelong educators who do their best to support their five children—Victoria, 18; Phoenix, 14; Beatrice, 11; Windsor, 10; and Carver, 9—and be whatever their kids need them to be, whether as coaches, as cheerleaders, or as besotted fans.

Individually, Nick said, all their children have their own interests in sports and physical health, and over the years have participated in cross country, volleyball, basketball, badminton, soccer, and track and field.

"The experiences we've had, both on-island and off, have guided us in raising our own children. While our kids have navigated elementary school, we encourage and support them in participating in as many sports, camps, clubs, etc. as possible," said Nick.

When asked which values and characteristics they try to impart to their children to prepare for the future, Nick said, "We both agree that through these varied experiences our children will be equipped with tools to more effectively negotiate life with a love for movement/sport, outdoor activities, and the arts, which translates to a healthier lifestyle and health benefits that will positively affect their health, both physical and mental, for a lifetime. More specifically, of the values inherent in sport participation, both individual and team, are vast. A few that come to mind are perseverance, sportsmanship, dedication, and leadership."

He added, "Although we may not discuss these values directly, or at least frequently with our kids, we can easily connect the dots and support these values as our children progress through their childhood(s). Implemented correctly, sports have the unique ability to teach kids about the importance of these values and the role they play in society."

At 44-years-old, Nick enjoys everything sports and fitness related, but he claims he does not really practice what he preaches to the degree that he'd like. On that note though, he said "I look forward to representing the NMI as a master athlete in the upcoming Oceania Masters Athletics Championships in late June, as well as representing Team NMI at the 2023 Solomon Islands Pacific Games as our chef de mission."

"Stay active, CNMI and Happy Father's Day to all!" he said.

As for new father Edward Dela Cruz Jr., whose son, Alexander "Sasha" Agafonov Dela Cruz is just a year old, the values that Edward wants to instill in him are "good character, integrity, discipline, accountability, empathy, and just overall always doing the right thing."

Edward has been married to Anastasia Agafonova Dela Cruz for three years and five months now, and both can be seen running with Sasha in his stroller up and down the Beach Road Pathway.

Edward, at 31 years old, is the president of the running club Run Saipan, runs every day, participates in the sports of athletics, and is a firefighter for the Aircraft Rescue and Firefighting.

When talking about his son joining sports eventually, he said: "Whatever sport he wants to play as he gets older, I'll be his No. 1 fan. If he doesn't join track and wants to be in James Lee's basketball federation, I will bite the bullet and throw full support, but we will see. He's definitely not going to grow up like his father on video games."

These fathers are just a small sample of fathers who do everything to make it happen at work and at home—and we honor every single father, father figure, stepfather, and all fathers out there who are basically superheroes in disguise.

Self-care tips for the everyday superhero

By TERI M. FLORES
CORRESPONDENT

Every night, starting at 8pm, just as he is putting his son to sleep, my 32-year-old son, Kevin, would disappear inside his study for an hour with a "Do Not Disturb" sign prominently hooked on the doorknob. Out of respect for his privacy, I did not dare ask what he does in that one hour, but I accidentally heard him explain to his buddy that he practices "silence" in that designated hour. Explaining further, my son said that he has dedicated certain hours in a week that he consciously uses to engage in activities promoting self-care.

Medical professionals define self-care as "any activity that we engage in to maintain and nourish our health, including mental, physical and emotional well-being." It can be as simple as enjoying your favorite cup of coffee every morning or devoting certain days and hours during the week to exercise.

Self-care is different for everyone, but what is common among the best dads is that good self-care allows fathers to be mentally, emotionally, and physically prepared, making them better men to their families and loved ones.

Making one's self-care a priority must be intentional. In the end, a good self-care program leads the way for dad to be the superhero he is meant to be.

Here are some tips that dads may find helpful in their journey to self-care:

Personal grooming. This includes getting a regular haircut and even indulging in a facial treatment twice a year. While others may think that applying lotion or sunscreen is strictly for babies and women, skincare using moisturizers and regular face washing keeps skin healthy, which then helps boost one's confidence.

Practice self-kindness. Positive self-talk and affirmations are ways by which dads can develop a kinder approach to themselves. Give yourself some slack and don't be too hard on yourself, Dad! It's not as if the responsibilities and expectations society places on you are not enough for you to carry.

Meditation. This is one of the most challenging tasks one can do, but studies have proven that meditating even just five or 10 minutes at a time can reduce stress and bring quiet peace to a loud world.

Diet. A healthy relationship with food (and beverages) may yet be the ultimate self-care practice dads need. Eating healthy is good for the body, mind, and soul. Making healthier eating choices is important and improves one's moods and energy levels, lowers mortality rate, and decreases the chances of suffering from mental health illnesses.

Exercise. Whether it is running, biking, or weightlifting, or just plain walking, get into a regular routine of physical activity that will keep you physically fit.

Stimulate your mind. Staying mentally fresh as one ages is the easiest and most affordable way to practice self-care. Read a book. Tackle a crossword puzzle or play word games. Solve mystery puzzles and even just enjoying regular talks with friends and family are great ways to keep your mind engaged.

Indulge your passions. Enjoy and indulge in the things and activities that bring you joy. Whether it is spending time at the golf course or visiting with friends for a karaoke session or playing your favorite video game, invest in time that will fill your heart's desire. There is nothing wrong nor selfish about enjoying some indulgences for the one who carry dad responsibilities.

Sleep. An eight-hour sleep is still the best way to recover one's strength.

Practicing and investing time for self-care among fathers impacts the overall well-being of the man who carries the responsibility of ensuring the health and happiness of his family. Making this dad's priority helps make him happier, more satisfied and better able to cope with the challenges that life throws his way.

China factory, consumer activity weakens in May

BEIJING (AP)—China’s consumer and factory activity weakened in May and record-breaking unemployment among young people in cities rose as an economic rebound following the end of anti-virus controls slowed.

Surveys found 20.8% of potential workers in cities aged 16-24 were unemployed, up from April’s previous record of 20.4%, the government reported Thursday.

China’s economic activity rebounded after the ruling Communist Party in December lifted controls that cut off access to major cities for weeks at a time and blocked most international travel. But consumers, uneasy about possible job losses, returned to shops and restaurants less quickly than expected.

“The foundation for the economic recovery is not yet solid,” the National Bureau of Statistics said in a report.

Economic growth accelerated to 4.5% over a year earlier in the three months ending in March from the previous quarter’s 2.9%. Growth will have to accelerate in coming quarters to hit the ruling party’s annual target of “around 5%.”

“The data published today suggest that the reopening recovery had largely fizzled out by May,” Julian Evans-Pritchard of Capital Economics said in a report. “The economy appears to have lost some further momentum during the first half of June, too.”

Retail sales rose 12.7% over a year earlier, but that was down from April’s 18.4%, which was barely half the rate expected by forecasters. Growth in factory output decelerated to 3.5% from the previous month’s 5.6% after interest rate hikes in the United States and Europe to cool inflation depressed demand for Chinese exports.

The youth unemployment figure represents about 6 million jobless people out of a pool of 33 million people aged 16-24 who want to work, according to the NBS spokesman, Fu Linghui.

Biden mum on Trump's indictment

WASHINGTON (AP)—It's rare for the leader of the free world to be rendered silent, but President Joe Biden is clearly determined to say as little as possible about his predecessor Donald Trump's federal indictment.

Biden's White House dodges questions about the matter. His campaign doesn't respond to them. And Biden himself wants nothing to do with it. "I have no comment on what happened," he told reporters Friday while in Rocky Mount, North Carolina.

The reticence reflects the precarious and unprecedented situation in which Biden finds himself. Just as Trump is the first former president to be charged by the federal government, Biden is the first incumbent to have his own administration indict his chief political rival.

While hardly unforeseen, Trump's indictment brought a fresh round of reminders throughout Biden world that the president does not want to be drawn into the drama with commentary of any sort. He's wary of providing fodder for Trump and his allies' efforts to portray the Justice Department as engaged in a politically motivated prosecution.

Eric Dezenhall, a longtime crisis communications consultant, said Biden's cautious path was prudent.

"There are certain positions you take not because they are persuasive but because they do the least damage," he said. "Any syllable Biden or the White House team utters will be used in court and politically to validate the witch hunt narrative."

Biden, who made restoring the independence of the Justice Department a central campaign promise in 2020, now aims to reinforce that principle as both a matter of politics and policy.

"I have never once — not one single time — suggested to the Justice Department what they should do or not do, relative to bringing a charge or not bringing a charge," Biden said Thursday. "I'm honest."

Later that evening, the White House said, the president learned of the 37 felony counts filed against Trump by a Miami grand jury through news coverage of Trump's announcement that he'd been summoned to surrender on Tuesday.

Asked Friday whether he had spoken to Attorney General Merrick Garland about the case, Biden replied curtly.

"I have not spoken to him at all," he told reporters. "I'm not going to speak to him."

Further complicating matters for Biden is that he faces his own special counsel probe into classified documents discovered at his home and former office. The circumstances were markedly different: Unlike Trump, Biden voluntarily returned the documents to the federal government.

Meanwhile, the president's son, Hunter, faces an ongoing Justice Department probe into his finances and the purchase of a firearm while under the influence of illegal substances.

Republicans defending Trump have already sought to accuse Biden of directing the prosecution, and they're alleging a double standard in how the Justice Department brings cases.

House Speaker Kevin McCarthy calls the Trump indictment a "grave injustice" and has pledged that House Republicans "will hold this brazen weaponization of power accountable."

The idea that the case has a political slant rings true to nearly half of Americans.

An ABC News/Ipsos poll conducted over the weekend found that 47% of adults believe the charges in the documents case are politically motivated, compared with 37% who say they are not. Still, Americans are also more likely to say Trump should be charged than that he should not, 48% to 35%. Most Republicans said he should not be charged, and 80% of them believe the charges are politically motivated.

The White House is pushing back against the idea of any political meddling in the prosecution. Aides steadfastly continued to not comment on the case when pressed several times on Monday.

Trump's historic federal arraignment virtually invisible to public

NEW YORK (AP)—Former President Donald Trump's federal arraignment in Miami on Tuesday was historic — yet virtually invisible to the public.

In an era when people are accustomed to instantly available images and sounds of important events, Trump's not-guilty plea to charges of hoarding classified documents was a step back in time. Hundreds of photographers and television crews were at the courthouse — many broadcasting live from outside — but they couldn't show the key moments inside the courtroom.

Efforts by news organizations to loosen restrictions that generally prohibit cameras in federal courtrooms failed, despite the event's unprecedented nature. It was a stark contrast from Trump's arraignment in New York earlier this year.

Trump eventually found a way Tuesday to fill the void after leaving the courthouse — with a stop at a Cuban restaurant, where he could bathe in the cheers of supporters.

"This is the visual he wants — I just left the court. I'm good," said CNN's John King.

Earlier, he arrived at the courthouse to be booked and enter his plea and then left without being seen. Cameras followed a motorcade of black vehicles with tinted windows.

"This is a little bit old-fashioned," said Fox News Channel's Mark Meredith. "We're not going to be able to see what's going on in the courtroom."

News organizations had petitioned the court to allow photographs of Trump to be taken prior to his arraignment, and permit the public release of an audio recording of the court proceeding after it was done. Yet on Monday night, U.S. Magistrate Judge Jonathan Goodman denied the requests.

Also Monday, Chief U.S. District Judge Cecilia Altonaga ordered that no journalists could possess electronic equipment anywhere in the courthouse on the day of the arraignment. Prior to her order, credentialed journalists at the courthouse had been allowed to use cell phones and computers.

"It's kind a black hole inside the building," said David Reiter, executive producer of special events for CBS News.

Most reporters in the courthouse were confined to an overflow room, where they watched the proceedings on "the kind of televisions you get in low-cost hotel rooms," CBS News reporter Scott MacFarlane said.

Through a random draw, some journalists — including at least one sketch artist — were allowed into the courtroom itself.

News organizations scurried to make arrangements to deal with the restrictions. Several television networks, for example, placed a handful of reporters and producers in the overflow room, sending them out one-by-one to report from the outside on what had happened. Reporters also discovered working phones by a bathroom that allowed them to make outgoing calls.

Russia steps up aerial strikes on Ukraine

KYIV, Ukraine (AP)—Russian forces fired cruise missiles at the southern Ukrainian city of Odesa and shelled the eastern Donetsk region early Wednesday, killing at least six people and damaging dozens of homes, regional Ukrainian officials said.

Russian forces have recently stepped up aerial strikes in their nearly 16-month war, a Ukrainian military spokesman said. The country's armed forces, meanwhile, have reported limited gains in the early stages of a counteroffensive to take back the nearly one-fifth of Ukraine's territory that is under Russian control.

The grinding Ukrainian advance is pressing slowly ahead, Deputy Defense Minister Hanna Maliar said Wednesday. Western analysts and military officials say the effort to dislodge entrenched, powerfully armed and large numbers of Russian troops could take years.

Ukrainian troops have advanced 200-500 meters (650-1,600 feet) at various sections of the front line around the Donetsk city of Bakhmut and 300-350 meters (980-1,150 feet) in the southern Zaporizhzhia region, Maliar claimed. Ukrainian forces have managed to make gains despite the Russian edge in artillery and air power and large number of landmines left behind by Russian troops, she said. Maliar noted that, since the start of Russia's full-scale invasion, Ukraine's losses on the battlefield had been "incomparably smaller" than those of Russian troops.

» Killing at least 6 amid Kyiv counteroffensive

It wasn't possible to verify the battlefield claims.

Ukrainian forces can expect to make slow progress in what will be a "hugely difficult" fight as the counteroffensive gains traction, a Western official said on condition of anonymity to discuss intelligence.

"Intense fighting is now ongoing in nearly all sectors of the front," the official said. "This is much more than probing. These are full-scale movements of armor and heavy equipment into the Russian security zone."

The official described the Ukrainian attacks as methodical and said that, broadly speaking, "Russian forces have put up a good defense."

In Odesa, three food warehouse employees were killed in a strike that also damaged homes, shops and cafes in the city's downtown, the regional administration said on Facebook. An additional 13 people were wounded.

Search teams were looking for possible survivors under the rubble of the warehouse, it said.

The attack on the port city, launched from the Black Sea, was the second in a week and involved four Kalibr cruise missiles, three of which were intercepted by air defenses, the administration said.

Blinken heads to China to salvage ties, keep communications open

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. Secretary of State Antony Blinken will travel to China this weekend as part of the Biden administration's push to repair deteriorating ties between Washington and Beijing and keep lines of communication open, the State Department said Wednesday. Blinken will be the most senior U.S. official to visit China since President Joe Biden took office. His visit had initially been planned for early this year but was postponed indefinitely after the discovery and shutdown of what the U.S. said was a Chinese spy balloon over the United States.

Since then, however, there have been lower-level engagements between the U.S. and China despite ongoing hostility and recriminations over both sides' actions in the Taiwan Strait, the South China Sea, China's refusal to condemn Russia for its war against Ukraine, and allegations from Washington that Beijing is attempting to boost its worldwide surveillance capabilities, including in Cuba.

The State Department said Blinken had spoken with his Chinese counterpart, Foreign Minister Qin Gang, on Tuesday night to confirm his trip, which will begin on Sunday and was first reported by The Associated Press and other news organizations last week. Blinken will leave Washington late Friday.

"While in Beijing, Secretary Blinken will meet with senior PRC officials where he will discuss the importance of maintaining open lines of communication to responsibly manage the U.S.-PRC relationship," the department said, using the acronym for the People's Republic of China. "He will also raise bilateral issues of concern, global and regional matters, and potential cooperation on shared transnational challenges."

Two senior U.S. officials downplayed the prospects for any significant breakthrough on the wide array of problems between the countries during Blinken's visit. Instead, they said it was aimed at restoring a sense of calm and normalcy to high-level contacts.

"This is a really critical series of engagements that we'll have in Beijing at a crucial time in the relationship that we again hope will, at a minimum, reduce the risk of miscalculation so that we do not veer into potential conflict," said Daniel Kritenbrink, the top U.S. diplomat for East Asia and the Pacific.

"We're not going to Beijing with the intent of having some sort of breakthrough or transformation in the way that we deal with one another," he said. "We're coming to Beijing with a realistic, confident approach and a sincere desire to manage our competition in the most responsible way possible."

Woman walking in California finds ancient mastodon tooth

APTOS, Calif. (AP)—A woman taking a Memorial Day weekend stroll on a California beach found something unusual sticking out of the sand: a tooth from an ancient mastodon.

But then the fossil vanished, and it took a media blitz and a kind-hearted jogger to find it again.

Jennifer Schuh found the foot-long (.30-meter) tooth sticking out of the sand on Friday at the mouth of Aptos Creek on Rio Del Mar State Beach, located off Monterey Bay in Santa Cruz County on California's central coast.

"I was on one side of the creek and this lady was talking to me on the other side and she said what's that at your feet," Schuh recounted. "It looked kind of weird, like burnt almost."

Schuh wasn't sure what she had found. So she snapped some photos and posted them on Facebook, asking for help.

The answer came from Wayne Thompson, paleontology collections advisor for the Santa Cruz Museum of Natural History.

Thompson determined that the object was a worn molar from an adult Pacific mastodon, an extinct elephant-like species.

"This is an extremely important find," Thompson wrote, and he urged Schuh to call him.

But when they went back to

This May 26, 2023, photo provided by the Jennifer Schuh shows a Mastodon Tooth in the sand at an Aptos, Calif., beach. AP the beach, the tooth was gone.

A weekend search failed to find it. Thompson then sent out a social media request for help in finding the artifact. The plea made international headlines.

On Tuesday, Jim Smith of nearby Aptos called the museum.

"I was so excited to get that call," said Liz Broughton, the museum's visitor experience manager. "Jim told us that he had stumbled upon it during one of his regular jogs along the beach, but wasn't sure of what he had found until he saw a picture of the tooth on the news."

Smith donated the tooth to the museum, where it will be on display Friday through Sunday.

The age of the tooth isn't clear. A museum blog says mastodons generally roamed California from about 5 million to 10,000 years ago.

"We can safely say this specimen would be less than 1 million years old, which is relatively 'new' by fossil standards," Broughton said in an email.

Woman, 28, accused of posing as HS student

HAHNVILLE, La. (AP)—A 28-year-old woman who enrolled at a Louisiana high school and posed as a 17-year-old student to learn English has been arrested along with her mother, authorities said Wednesday.

Martha Jessenia Gutierrez Serrano and her mother, Marta Elizabeth Serrano Alvarado, 46, both of Boutte, were arrested Tuesday, the St. Charles Parish Sheriff's Office said in a news release. Each are charged with a one count of injuring public records.

Serrano Alvarado used a fake passport and birth certificate from Honduras to register and enroll her daughter at Hahnville High School for the 2022-2023 school year, the sheriff's office said.

Sheriff Greg Champagne, at a news conference Wednesday, said Gutierrez Serrano told investigators she enrolled in school to learn the English language.

"She wanted to learn English. She wanted to become proficient in the English language," Champagne said.

"There was no nefarious reason behind this," he said, adding that the falsifying of government documents to do this was just "bad judgment."

Champagne noted there were other avenues the women could have taken, including enrolling in ESL or GED programs. "Certainly that is a much better option than falsifying records," he said.

The sheriff said Gutierrez Serrano did not participate in any extracurricular activities and had no disciplinary issues while attending school.

"There is no current evidence of any other criminal activity or inappropriate conduct" by either woman, he said.

Four days after the school year ended on May 25, an internal investigation began after the St. Charles Parish School System received a tip that a female student at Hahnville High School believed to be 17 may actually have been in her mid-20s, the sheriff's office said.

It was unknown if either woman has an attorney who could comment on the arrests.

"The school system will enhance processes to determine the authenticity of enrollment documents for current and future students as well as modify policy and procedures as warranted," the school system said in a statement late Tuesday, The Times-Picayune/The New Orleans Advocate reported. "As this is an ongoing investigation conducted by the Sheriff's Office, no further information or specifics may be shared at this time."

This is not the first time this year that an adult has been accused of posing as a U.S. high school student. In January, a 29-year-old woman was charged with using false documents to enroll in a New Jersey high school and attend classes over a four-day period. A judge in May allowed her to enter a pretrial intervention program.

Amazon's cloud business slows

NEW YORK (AP)—When the pandemic hit three years ago, Amazon was one of the few businesses that thrived.

Customers flocked to the online commerce site amid global lockdowns. But even when those lockdowns eventually lifted and Amazon's sales slowed as people returned to stores, the company could still count on its massive cash cow: Amazon Web Services.

Now even the lucrative cloud services business is feeling pressure.

Companies are trimming their expenses amid concerns about high inflation and fears that a recession might be around the corner. And many of them are being more cautious about their cloud costs, leading to a slowdown in one of Amazon's profitable businesses. The tech giant's first quarter earnings report showed its cloud unit generated $21.4 billion and was growing at 16% in the first three months of this year—much slower than the 37% growth rate a year prior.

It is under those circumstances that AWS held its two-day security-focused cloud conference Tuesday in Anaheim, California. The meeting is one of several big events Amazon hosts annually to tout its cloud offerings to its clients or other companies that might be interested in storing their data on its vast network of servers around the world.

The conference, though, was overshadowed on Tuesday afternoon when an AWS outage hampered the ability of many customers to operate their sites. Amazon said it fixed the issue within four hours.

HK protest song disappears from music streaming sites, social media

HONG KONG (AP)—A popular Hong Kong protest song was no longer available Wednesday on several major music streaming sites and social media platforms, after the government sought an injunction to ban the tune.

“Glory to Hong Kong” rose to popularity during the 2019 pro-democracy protests, and became an unofficial protest anthem. In 2020, the government outlawed the protest slogan “Liberate Hong Kong, revolution of our times” over secessionist and subversive connotations, and the song was widely considered to be banned in the city as its lyrics contained parts of the slogan.

Hong Kong, once a bastion of free speech and expression, has come under tighter scrutiny by Beijing after the unrest in 2019. Since then, its political system has undergone a major overhaul to ensure that only “patriots” loyal to Beijing can hold office. More than 250 people have been arrested under a sweeping national security law passed in 2020 that critics say is aimed at suppressing dissent.

The song rose to the top of Apple iTunes’ charts last week after the Hong Kong government sought an injunction from the courts to ban “unlawful acts” related to the song and any derivatives of it, including the lyrics and melody.

But the song was no longer available on music streaming platforms such as Spotify and Apple Music on Wednesday. The original version of the tune was also not available on Facebook and Instagram’s Reels function.

Spotify said in an emailed statement that the song was pulled by its distributor and not the platform. Facebook, Instagram, and Apple Music did not immediately comment.

The song’s creator, DGX Music, said in a post on their Facebook page that it was “dealing with some technical issues related to streaming platforms” and apologized for the “temporary” issue.

Versions of the song, including the one by the original creators, were still available on video-streaming site YouTube.

The Hong Kong government sought an injunction to ban the song after it was mistakenly played as the city’s anthem at several international sporting events in the past year, instead of China’s national anthem “March of the Volunteers.”

Court hearings in the case have been adjourned until July 21.

Climate protesters throw paint and glue at Monet painting in Swedish museum

STOCKHOLM (AP)—Two women were detained in Stockholm after they threw “some kind of paint” at a painting by French artist Claude Monet and then glued themselves to the frame, Sweden’s National Museum said Wednesday.

The painting, “The Artist’s Garden at Giverny,” was on display as part of an exhibition at the museum. Spokesperson Hanna Tottmar said artwork was encased in glass and “is now being examined by the museum’s conservators to see if any damage has occurred.”

The exhibit, titled “The Garden,” was closed but expected to reopen to visitors on Thursday. “We naturally distance ourselves from actions where art or cultural heritage risks being damaged ... regardless of the purpose,” Per Hedström, the museum’s acting director, said.

Before they were apprehended, the activists smeared red paint on the painting, according to a video of Wednesday’s incident.

Tory Lanez sentencing on Megan Thee Stallion shooting is delayed to August

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Tory Lanez’s sentencing for shooting and wounding hip-hop star Megan Thee Stallion was delayed on Tuesday.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge David Herriford accepted the defense’s request to delay Lanez’s sentencing, which is now scheduled for Aug. 7. Prosecutors are seeking a 13 year prison sentence and Lanez faces deportation to his native Canada.

Herriford decided to give Lanez’s lawyers more time to prepare their sentencing recommendation, which is due Aug. 1. The judge, who will sentence Lanez, denied a motion from Lanez’ defense attorneys for a new trial on May 9.

During the brief court hearing, Lanez mostly kept his head down and barely made eye contact with anyone. He wore an orange jail outfit and black cap.

Lanez was convicted in December of three felonies: assault with a semiautomatic firearm; having a loaded, unregistered firearm in a vehicle and discharging a firearm with gross negligence.

Barbara Kingsolver wins Women’s Prize for Fiction

LONDON (AP)—American novelist Barbara Kingsolver won the prestigious Women’s Prize for Fiction Wednesday with “Demon Copperhead,” the Dickens-inspired tale of a boy’s struggle against the odds in a corner of America scarred by opioid addiction.

Kingsolver’s Appalachian coming-of-age tale was announced as winner of the 30,000 pounds ($38,000) award at a ceremony in London.

Kingsolver, 68, also won the 2023 Pulitzer Prize for fiction for the novel, which transplants Charles Dickens’ “David Copperfield” to modern-day southwest Virginia, where the author lives.

It was a second victory for Kingsolver, who previously won the Women’s Prize in 2010 for “The Lacuna.”

“Lightning strikes twice,” she said as she accepted the award.

Kingsolver said she wrote the book to tell stories from a part of the United States—the mountainous Appalachia region—that is often overlooked or regarded as “just a joke.”

“We’re the last demographic in the U.S. that progressive Author Barbara Kingsolver attends the 2023 Women's Prize For Fiction Winner's Ceremony, in London, Wednesday, June 14, 2023.

people are allowed to laugh at,” Kingsolver told The Associated Press. “And we’re mad about it.”

Kingsolver has long woven social issues into her novels, which include “The Bean Trees” and “The Poisonwood Bible,” and helped establish the PEN/Bellwether Prize for Socially Engaged Fiction. Oprah Winfrey chose “Demon Copperhead” for her book club last year.

Journalist Louise Minchin, who chaired the Women’s Prize judging panel, said the winning novel was “a towering, deeply powerful and significant book.”

“‘Demon Copperhead’ tackles universal themes — from addiction and poverty, to family, love, and the power of friendship and art,” Minchin said. “It packs a triumphant emotional punch, and it is a novel that will withstand the test of time.”

Kingsolver said the book came from a desire “to tell the story of this place where I live and what has been done to it.”

“Appalachia has been so particularly exploited, almost treated as an internal colony,” she said, calling the opioid epidemic “one more turn in this exploitation trade.”

“It’s a hard story to tell. And I really spent years thinking that it was totally impossible. And then it dawned on me that that’s just what Charles Dickens did. Why not tell his story, in my voice, in my place?”

Kingsolver said she didn’t think the great novelist, who chronicled the extremes of poverty and wealth in Victorian Britain, would mind her borrowing his plot.

“I love his anger, and I felt him saying, ‘Do this,’” she said.

Kingsolver beat five other Women’s Prize finalists, including Maggie O’Farrell’s Italian Renaissance tale “The Marriage Portrait” and Laline Paull’s dolphin drama “Pod.”

Founded in 1996, the prize is open to female English-language writers from any country. Previous winners include Zadie Smith, Tayari Jones and Susanna Clarke. Last year’s prize went to Canadian-American novelist Ruth Ozeki for “The Book of Form and Emptiness.”

Grad student frets about boyfriend’s social life

DEAR ABBY: My partner, “Josh,” and I (we’re both male) have been together for two years. We met while living in LA and were fortunate to be accepted to grad schools in NYC. We’re not living together now as our schools are in different boroughs, but we see each other most weekends.

Recently, Josh has been trying to make more friends, as our social network seems more heavily skewed toward people from my circles (school, past work, etc.). I have the benefit of living on a grad school campus with in-person classes. Ninety percent of my peers are within the three buildings around me. Josh’s school has more students spread around Manhattan.

I’m trying to figure out how I can support him making friends organically while not feeling like I’m ignoring him or missing out on time with him. We communicate well, and I’ve asked how I can help him, or if I should give him more space (i.e., not come over some weekends to give him more free time to make plans with other people), but he gets upset at me not being around when I could be.

I’m not sure how to support his social growth. I’ve tried suggesting he join student groups, take in-person classes rather than hybrid or online, join local events and groups, etc., but he seems resistant. What should I do?

OUT OF IDEAS IN THE BRONX

DEAR OUT OF IDEAS: You and your partner have very different personalities. It should be apparent that Josh likes being a part of your circle to the point that he doesn’t want to build one of his own. He also may feel more confident when you are close by.

As much as you care for him, this indicates a basic incompatibility. While this may be acceptable to you now, with time it may become an increasingly heavy burden. Couples counseling could be useful, perhaps from an LGBTQ community center or a student health center on your campus, to help you both thrash this out. From where I sit, it appears you are already doing as much to support Josh as you can.

DEAR ABBY: I am dating a guy I will be formally engaged to soon. My problem is I’m my mother’s caregiver, and it’s not an easy task. I love her and would do it all over again; however, I hope never to HAVE to do it again. My soon-to-be fiancé has several medical issues, and I don’t want to end up being HIS caregiver. I know something could just as well happen to me, but I’m very afraid of this. Please advise.

McClanahan earns 10th win, Rays take 2 of 3 from Rangers

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.

(AP)—Shane McClanahan became the first 10-game winner in the major leagues and the Tampa Bay Rays beat the Texas Rangers 7-3 on Sunday, taking two of three games in a match up of the teams with best records in baseball.

McClanahan (10-1) allowed three runs, all in the third inning, and four hits over seven innings. The 26-year-old left-hander retired his final 15 batters.

Wander Franco homered off Martín Pérez (6-2) in the fourth inning for MLB-leading Tampa Bay (48-20), which improved to 31-7 at home. Randy Arozarena, Isaac Paredes, Taylor Walls, and Harold Ramírez added run-scoring hits for the Rays.

Darko Rajakovic thrilled to be taking over as Raptors coach

TORONTO (AP) — Darko Rajakovic has been in a good mood ever since the Toronto Raptors made him the 10th head coach in franchise history.

“The last three days I’ve had a smile on my face so much my jaw is starting to hurt,” Rajakovic joked Tuesday at an outdoor news conference.

Rajakovic, 44, replaces Nick Nurse, who was fired on April 21 after Toronto went 41-41 and lost in the opening round of the play-in tournament.

“We’re really, really excited for this day,” Raptors president Masai Ujiri said, seated alongside Rajakovic on a stage set up outside the team’s downtown arena. “I know it’s change and sometimes change is hard, but we believe change is good, and change is good for our ball club and our organization now.”

General manager Bobby Webster said Rajakovic “didn’t go in as the favorite” when Toronto started its search, but won over the Raptors as the process evolved.

“He’s really smart, he’s detailed, he’s structured,” Webster said. “He has a really diverse set of experiences internationally, but also in the NBA. He’s worked for a number of organizations and directly with a lot of, like, high-caliber players and it just kind of all fit. He just exceeded our expectations and just really impressed us.”

Rajakovic said he felt an immediate connection with Toronto’s front office staff.

“The first time we started talking on a Zoom call, what I felt from day one was unity,” Rajakovic said. “Everyone in the organization, you could just feel that everybody is together.”

Born and raised in Serbia, Rajakovic has been involved in coaching since his teens. He coached in Spain before coming to the United States.

Rajakovic was a head coach for two seasons in the G League (then called the NBA Development League) before joining the Oklahoma City Thunder as an assistant before the 2014-15 season. He spent the 2019-20 season as an assistant with Phoenix, then joined Memphis the following year.

At his introductory news conference, Rajakovic fielded a question in Serbian from a Serbian-language broadcaster based in Toronto. The city has a significant population of Serbian immigrants.

Rajakovic said it “means the world” to be the second Serbian-born coach in the NBA after Igor Kokosov, who led the Suns in 2018-19.

“It means so much to the Serbian community here in Toronto,” Rajakovic said. “A lot of people reached out to me. It means a lot to my family back home and the whole basketball community in Serbia.”

Toronto’s new hire was introduced on the four-year anniversary of the team’s first and only NBA title. The Raptors beat Golden State in six games in the Finals in 2019, Nurse’s first season as coach.

“Let’s go and do it again,” Ujiri yelled to a small group of watching fans as the event wrapped up. “We saw this thing happen last night (with Denver winning the NBA title). We’ve done it here before and we’re going to do it again.”

Raptors players Precious Achiuwa, Dalano Banton, Christian Koloko, Jeff Dowtin Jr., Ron Harper Jr. and Joe Wieskamp were on hand for Rajakovic’s introduction.

Webster confirmed Tuesday that guard Fred VanVleet has opted out of the final year of his contract and will become a free agent.

“Obviously on good terms with Fred, spoke to him yesterday,” Webster said. “I think that (decision) was just kind of expected, wasn’t really unexpected.”

Guard Gary Trent Jr. faces a similar decision on whether to opt out of the final year of his deal before the end of next week, Webster said.

Nuggets built a championship team the right way, and built it to last

By TIM REYNOLDS
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

The newly crowned NBA champions—they got there Monday night, beating the Miami Heat 94-89 to end the NBA Finals in five games — have five starters that are all 30 and under. They have a superstar leading the way, an elite second option, and a slew of really good players who could have bigger roles elsewhere yet chose to be part of something more meaningful.

All of that could have been said about the Golden State Warriors when they won their first of their four most recent titles in 2015.

Now, it’s the Nuggets who are following a similar — and proven — formula.

“You know, Pat Riley said something many years ago,” Nuggets coach Michael Malone said after it was all over. “I used to have it up on my board when I was a head coach in Sacramento, and it talked about the evolution in this game and how you go from a nobody to an upstart, and you go from an upstart to a winner and a winner to a contender and a contender to a champion, and the last step is after a champion is to be a dynasty.”

Even in a championship moment, Malone is already thinking about more. Riley, the Heat president and a nine-time champion as a coach, player and executive, is wired the same way.

It’s not crazy to think the Nuggets can do more. For starters, they have Nikola Jokic.

There are other stars who stand out in their own ways — Philadelphia’s Joel Embiid replaced Jokic as MVP this year, past MVP Giannis Antetokounmpo of Milwaukee may be the best two-way player in the league, Dallas’ Luka Doncic is surely going to be an MVP before long—but there’s no other Jokic, who has gone from second-round pick to triple-double machine.

It’s time to end all debate about Jokic. He’s slow, can’t jump and will never wow anyone with athleticism. And none of that matters. He’s smart, he’s selfless and he’s unstoppable. Period. End of story. The best player in the playoffs, the NBA Finals MVP, and now the big man from Sombor, Serbia is a champion. The days of any Jokic slander being allowed are officially over.

“I think there’s more to come, actually, from Jok,” Nuggets guard Jamal Murray said. “I think we haven’t seen a side of Jok that we are going to see where he can be just pure dominance all the way, the whole game, even more than he has been.”

Here’s what the other 29 teams should say when they hear that: “Yikes.”

Murray is to Jokic what Dwyane Wade was to LeBron James, what Kobe Bryant was to Shaquille O’Neal (before it became the other way around), what Scottie Pippen was to Michael Jordan. He is Robin next to Batman, a guy who would be a No. 1 option on many other teams yet checked his ego at the door and made it work in Denver.

Murray has sacrificed some stats. Some spotlight, too. The championship ring that he’ll be getting this fall, however, will have exactly the same amount of diamonds as the one Jokic will get. It all evens out.

“To be here just kind of rounds it out and shows that when we are given the right circumstances and everybody healthy, God willing, we can do it,” Murray said. “I think when we’re playing our best basketball, we are a very hard team to stop.”

It’s difficult to argue that point.

To be fair, this wasn’t the toughest path a team ever took to a title. Denver beat two No. 8 seeds—Minnesota and Miami—along with a No. 7 seed in the Los Angeles Lakers and a No. 4 seed in Phoenix to win this championship. But it was dominant. The Nuggets never trailed in a series. They went 16-4 in the postseason. They won 10 of their final 11 games. They left no doubt.

Malone was an assistant coach in Golden State just as the Warriors were starting down the path of becoming the NBA’s immovable object. He left two years before Stephen Curry’s first title to take over in Sacramento, getting fired early into Year 2 there. Then Denver hired him, and his first three seasons there resulted in zero playoff appearances. Usually, that gets a guy fired.

The Nuggets kept him. The debt was repaid in full on Monday night. Patience paid off, and so did institutional belief that Malone was the right guy, that Jokic—the greatest No. 41 pick in NBA draft history—would become a great, that Denver was building something the right way.

“You know, it’s not for everybody,” Malone said. “This was the best course for us, and it’s allowed us to get here.”

It very well may allow them to stay there.

Winning isn’t easy and winning a championship is darn near impossible. There have been five different champions in the last five years now. Three of those titlists—Toronto (2019), the Lakers (2020) and Milwaukee (2021)—have since fired the coaches who won those championships. Getting to the top is hard. Staying on top is tougher. Malone knows this, and starting this fall, the Nuggets are going to learn it.

But he thinks they’re also built for whatever comes next.

“We’re not satisfied,” Malone said. “We accomplished something this franchise has never done before, but we have a lot of young talented players in that locker room, and I think we just showed through 16 playoff wins what we’re capable of on the biggest stage in the world.”

Hawks’ Snyder finalizes coaching staff for 2023-24 season, includes Kokoskov, Brey

ATLANTA (AP)—Atlanta Hawks coach Quin Snyder, who took over the team in February, finalized his staff for next season on Wednesday.

Igor Kokoskov, who spent one season as the Phoenix Suns’ head coach, takes over as Snyder’s lead assistant. The Hawks also hired Mike Brey, who spent the last 23 seasons leading Notre Dame’s program.

The remaining assistants are Bryan Bailey, Brittney Donaldson, Steve Klei, Antonio Lang, Sanjay Lumpkin, Ekpe Udoh and Jeff Watkinson. Klei and Watkinson have been with the Hawks since March.

In addition, Reggie Onwukamuche will take over as player development coach, while Bryan George will work in player development, advance scouting and video.

The only holdovers from the staff Snyder inherited after taking over for Nate McMillan are O’Neil Holder (player development) and Jacob Porter (video).

“We have assembled a coaching staff that brings together a diversity of experiences and expertise to develop, connect with and challenge our players,” Snyder said in a statement. “Each of our coaches bring something unique to our group and I am excited to work with this staff and find ways to continually improve our team.”

After McMillan was fired, Snyder coached the Hawks to a 10-11 mark over the remainder of the regular season. The team knocked off eventual NBA finalist Miami in the play-in game to claim a No. 7 seed, but lost to the Boston Celtics in the opening round of the playoffs.

Dove The top seed heading into the finals—MP United—are the champions of the Flores-Péé Luwal (Intermediate) Division of the Dove Women's League.

They defeated Southern United Football Club, 1-0, last Sunday at the NMI Soccer Training Center in Koblerville.

The winner-take-all championship game went on intensely as both teams were at a stalemate in the first half.

The only goal came after a break in SUFC's defense and MP United's Moriah Sablan clipped the net in the 45th minute. SUFC had no such luck no matter how hard they tried as the match clock wound down and handed the victory to MP United.

The roster in the championship team included Sablan, Neeka Atalig, Soledad Quan, Rachel Salalila, Laarni Zapanta, Aleina Hofschneider, Michelle Ann Masga, Jaime Camacho, Nicole Deleon Guerrero, Conchita Camacho, Douglas "Spyder" Schmidt finally broke Ol'Aces' long silence when he scored on a corner triple to cut their deficit to 74-72.

Deleon Guerrero retaliated with another crucial bucket on the other end before Schmidt made a free throw on a foul by Standish to make it 76-73 with 3:09 ticks remaining.

Following a timeout by Cortez, Quan again rose to the occasion when he hit a 16-footer with 1:30 left on the clock, which was reminiscent of his game-winning jumper against Puerto Rico

For Pharmin, he said he's feeling really good heading into the Oceania Masters event at the end of June. "I'm feeling good, just of course a little bit more stuff to work on so that come game time, everything goes smoothly. Hopefully everything goes well. I'm excited because we're hosting again."

Robin Sapong, NMA general secretary, said after the events, "Overall happy with the turnout. Our coaches will continue with our athletes' training and preparation towards the Oceania Cup."

The Oceania Cup and Oceania Masters is slated for June 22-26.

Twelve gold medalists from the 2022 Northern Marianas Pacific Mini Games are coming back to Saipan. The Oceania Cup also provides an opportunity to qualify for the Budapest World Championships and Paris Olympics, with the same number of ranking points as the 2023 Pacific Games.

In the match between Matansa FC and Tan Holdings FC, it ended in a 1-1 draw. Tan Holdings drew first blood in the 33rd minute after a quiet first half. Attempts at the goal came and went for both teams until the Matansa's Justidy Leon Guerrero tied it up in the 59th minute.

Paire FC and Shirley's FC then took a crack at it with the game ending 2-1 in favor of Paire.

Cassidee Flores of Shirley's FC nipped the goal early 15 minutes into the game. However, Paire was not out for the count as they came from behind and scored their two goals late in the second half.

Natalie Hill-Beyer scored the first goal in the 54th minute and the winning goal was made in the 58th minute by Elizabeth Culp.

Schmidt answered with another 3-pointer 10 seconds later to make it a 2-point game, 78-76, but Deleon Guerrero went perfect from the line with 1:01 left to peg the score at 80-76.

Quan's two splits from the free throw line and Schmidt's lone free throw then ended the scoring, as New Chang Ming completed the mother of all comebacks to win the open division diadem.

It was an improbable win, to say the least, for New Chang Ming as Ol'Aces started the game like a house on fire and led 26-10 after the first quarter thanks to 6 points apiece from Schmidt and Basa.

They somewhat stabilized things at the start of the second quarter with Santos and Deleon Guerrero finally finding their rhythm on offense and entered halftime starting at only a 12-point deficit, 36-48.

Aranda and Rodel Pastrana then joined Deleon Guerrero in carrying the offense for New Chang Ming at the start of the second half, as they combined for 13 of

STAG conducts cleanup of Wing Beach

STAG The Saipan Tactical Airsoft Group in partnership with the Bureau of Environmental Coastal Quality participated in the islandwide beach cleanup as part of the group's commitment in serving the islands. The group aims to not just promote the sport but also to be good ambassadors to the community through airsoft.

STAG members and their family members collected a few pounds of trash along Wing Beach in Marpi.

"Surprisingly, the coasts of Wing Beach had very little trash, and I want to commend the people of CNMI for that. It was only at the entrance area of the beach where we collected most of the trash," said STAG spokesperson Jershwin Angeles.

Just like in previous years, STAG will be seen once again in Pistang Pinoy 2023 on June 18 at the Marianas Business Plaza in Susupe in celebration of the 125th Philippine Independence Day.

STAG will have an airsoft shooting range as one of the group's fundraising activities where people can actually use an airsoft rifle or pistol to shoot on different targets. Aside from that, there will also be a photo booth and awesome STAG merchandise to sell.

"The feeling of excitement and adrenaline rush in airsoft shooting is remarkable, really a must try for everyone! STAG has been preparing for months and have put so much planning and effort into making this event a memorable one. I am inviting everyone to check our booth at the Pistang Pinoy 2023 and try the airsoft shooting, purchase one of our awesome design merchandise or just hang out with the boys," said Angeles. (PR)

"After the first half, I told them 'the game is still long but this is it! We have to start playing well beginning in the third' and they did it!"

Cortez then thanked Saipan Centennial Lions Club and organizers of the 2nd Annual Saipan Centennial Lions Basketball League, led by commissioner Sonny Ebu, for running another successful league. He also extended his gratitude to their supporters who cheered for them all throughout the season, including the playoffs and the championship game.

"Lastly, I like to congratulate Ol'Aces for a great finals game. It just so happened our team got the breaks in the end and our players really showed their true heart!" he said.

The Tanapag Middle School Basketball Team member said the clinic also taught him how to prevent injuries, teamwork, and the keys to playing basketball.

"But the most important thing I learned is how to work as a team. No matter how good your players are, teamwork always matters. Some teams in the outdoor leagues have one of the best players but no teamwork was built. So this is the most important thing I learned," he said.

Eleven-year-old Derek and his brother 4-year-old Adrien Dylan Tenorio said they had a lot of fun taking part in the basketball clinic.

"The kids enjoyed it, especially my youngest son who got to meet new friends. Coaches explained the rules about playing basketball to the kids. The most important lesson was really about sportsmanship," said their father, Dexter Tenorio.

Derek goes to school at Francisco M. Sablan Middle School, while Adrien Dylan is enrolled at San Antonio Head Start. Both are also members of Basketball Team MadFlex Sports, who Dexter heads.

Let's Move Marianas successfully held a free basketball clinic with over 70 participants taking part in the three-and-a-half hour event last Saturday at the Marianas High School Gymnasium.

Organizer Omar Ajoste said they're happy with the turnout and are glad that the youth had a worthwhile activity to do with school finally out.

"We are thankful for the diverse ethnicity that came out to the basketball clinic from ages 4 years old and older...

Basketball clinics tend to average 40 participants and we surpassed that in this year's LMM Basketball Clinic. Moreover, we taught everyone at the LMM Basketball Clinic lessons like basketball 101 basics, defense, cylinder principle, respect, and teamwork," he said.

The LMM Basketball Clinic started with a zumba session conducted by BIBA Active Community Zumba led by Zin Joseph Caranto. It was followed by an injury prevention session by Commonwealth Health Center Physical Therapy staff Dr. Roberto Marilla.

As for the basketball clinic itself, Ajoste was helped by former national coach Rufino Aguon, certified referee Lito Salas, and 670 Sonics Basketball Club basketball coaches and former basketball players.

Ajoste, who is the head coach of 670 Sonics, then thanked Let's Move Marianas, the Division of Youth Services, and the CHCC Public Health Services Non-Communicable Disease Programs for partnering in the free basketball clinic.

He also gave a shout out to former Basketball Association of the Northern Mariana Islands president Abner Venus, who recently passed, for planting in him the seed of sharing basketball knowledge.

Participants of the LMM Basketball Clinic only had good feedback for the event.

Beng Palacios, 14 years old from Marianas High School, said the clinic was a good experience to learn to play basketball.

"My biggest takeaways were playing organized basketball with random people, learning how to play defense, and how to be a better overall player."

Another MHS student, 17-year-old J.C. Ferrer of the Lady Dolphins basketball team, said the basketball clinic was very exciting.

"We got to learn many things like stretching more so you don't get injured. To me that was probably the most Flor Jones won CNMI Women's Golf Association's June monthly tournament last Saturday, June 10, at LaoLao Bay Golf & Resort east course.

The 46-year-old co-owner of Top Shelf Wine & Spirits topped the six-player field with a net of 70 built around a gross of 85 (43-42).

The 15-handicapper attributed her win last Saturday to being calm and collected on the Kagman golf course.

"My game came together last Saturday in this tournament as I was able to keep the ball in play and my approach shots were mostly on point. The biggest factor was my putting—no three-putts—which has cost me in the past," she said.

The Manila-born but Mindanao, Philippines-raised Jones also said practicing some rounds before the June tourney definitely helped.

"I worked hard on my chipping and putting the week before the tournament and thankfully it paid off at the right time."

She then dedicated her win to her fellow CWGA members, most especially the ladies that were part of her group last Saturday.

"I suppose I should dedicate at least part of this win to the ladies in my foursome, particularly Yuko Togawa as she is always a good example on how to play golf. And I need to mention my husband as well, who has been giving me a lot of encouragement and tips on my putting stroke," said Jones.

Coming in runner-up in the June tourney was Rose Rohringer who shot a net 77 (92, 46-46), while completing the Top 3 was Togawa with her net 81 (88, 40-48).

Others who played in the June tourney, with their net scores in parenthesis, were Doll Yamagishi (82), Niri-mai Koebel (85), and Terry Guerrero (91).

The club continues to look for new members as the new season continues. For those interested in becoming a member of CWGA or for more information, contact CWGA president Yuko Togawa at 287-9856, vice president Lorraine Babauta at 287-0621, or treasurer Lou Kim at 783-7317.

Top seed Cordon upset by unranked Muramoto

Top seed Kevin Cordon of Guatemala was eliminated by unranked Ryoma Muramoto of Japan on Day 3 of the TakeCare Saipan International 2023 last night at the Gilbert C. Ada Gymnasium.

After a thrilling and intense three sets, it was the end of the road for Cordon as he could not make it happen in the tiebreaker.

Cordon had a 4-0 lead in the first set, but blew it as Muramoto came from behind to snatch it, 21-17.

In the second set, Cordon had another wide lead up until the 10th point when Muramoto crept up after multiple mistakes by Cordon, for a close 11-10 game.

Cordon put his smashes and kills into overdrive as he pushed for more points to ensure he won the second set and forced a tiebreaker.

Cordon won a cliffhanger set as Muramoto was never too far behind. At 20-17 and when Cordon thought he had sealed the deal, he rushed his return and hit the net. It was a long rally until finally Muramoto tired out and Cordon won, 21-17.

The winner-take-all third set began with Muramoto drawing first blood. Cordon didn't let up easily and led 4-3. However, Muramoto gained the upper hand as he aimed his smashes at Cordon's feet and took the lead, 5-4.

Muramoto took this change of momentum into his favor and caused Cordon mistakes in his volleys at the net. Cordon was down, 8-12, after an outside serve and was stuck there as Muramoto overtook him, 8-13, 8-14, but finally gained a point after a well-placed return that just painted the inside line. But Muramoto's speed and tactics to get Cordon to volley near the net paid off as he shut down Cordon, 21-12.

In the other ranked matches of the day, No. 3 seed Su Li Yang overpowered Jia Wei Joel Koh, 21-6, 21-14.

Japan's unranked Manami Suizu took down the No. 1 seed in women's singles, Chinese-Taipei's Sung Shuo Yun, in two sets, 21-19, 21-15.

Japan's Tomoka Miyazaki defeated No. 4 seed Lin Hsiang Ti of Chinese-Taipei, 21-17, 21-15.

Liao Jhuo-Fu shut down No. 5 Jeon Hyeok Jin in three well-fought sets, 21-14, 4-21, 19-21.

New Chang Ming Market completed a comeback for the ages to beat Martech-Ol'Aces, 82-77, in the winner-take-all championship of the open division of the 2nd Annual Saipan Centennial Lions Basketball League last Tuesday night at the Koblerville Basketball Court.

Down by 9 points, 67-58, entering the fourth and final quarter, New Chang Ming strung together 6 straight points starting with a Keith Santos triple while being fouled.

He would miss the free throw but New Chang Ming would get the rebound and Shane Deleon Guerrero made it a 5-point swing when he drove in for a layup, 67-63, with 9:50 left in the ballgame.

After a fruitless possession by Ol'Aces, Santos was fouled by Preston Basa and split his charities to make it just a 3-point game, 67-64.

Center Kelvin Fitial would get hit on the next play but missed both charities, but Ol'Aces got one back when New Chang Ming coach Dennis Cortez was assessed a technical. Basa was all twine from the 15-foot line to make it a 4-point lead for Ol'Aces.

Alex Standish was fouled on the other end and made 1 out of 2 and after yet another miss by Ol'Aces, Jack Aranda would stick a 3-pointer to tie it all up at 68-all at the 7:30 mark of the match.

Then with 5:52 left, Finals MVP Sidney Quan gave New Chang Ming its first taste of the lead at 70-68 following a nifty spin move and layup.

New Chang Ming would lose point guard Jeff Castro in the next possession when he picked up his fifth foul. He compounded matters when he didn't leave the court immediately and another technical foul was whistled on the team.

It was 70-69 when Basa again canned the technical free throw, but Quan once more came to the rescue with another timely basket to make it a 3-point New Chang Ming lead, 72-69, with only five minutes to go.

Ol'Aces would cough it up in the next play and Deleon Guerrero fed Standish for an
